Dear chevre,

This upcoming Sunday, we'll sit down together around a table to remember the Sho'ah, the Holocaust. Using a new seder model called "Light from the Darkness," with the leadership of our confirmation class students, we'll examine the worst atrocities antisemitism inflicted on the Jewish people. In November, when we commemorate the violent pogrom of Kristallnacht (November 9-10, 1938), it's fitting to think about and examine antisemitism and how best to combat it. Kanye West's recent appalling diatribes against Jews, and those who uncritically amplified them, including neo-Nazis over a Los Angeles freeway, add extra urgency. Documentary filmmaking studio MRC Entertainment's co-leaders Modi Wiczzyk, Asif Satchu, and Scott Tenley (a Jew, a Muslim, and a Christian) released a joint statement on their decision to not distribute their already-completed documentary on West. It opens, after the preamble:

Kanye is a producer and sampler of music. Last week he sampled and remixed a classic tune that has charted for over 3000 years—the lie that Jews are evil and conspire to control the world for their own gain. This song was performed acapella in the time of the Pharaohs, Babylon and Rome, went acoustic with The Spanish Inquisition and Russia's Pale of Settlement, and Hitler took the song electric. Kanye has now helped mainstream it in the modern era.

We need as many people as possible to swim against that stream. As we invite and rally allies in our modern era's fight against antisemitism, our Jewish history and identity require, I believe, an understanding of antisemitism that urges us to simultaneously recognize and fight other oppressions. Racism, classism, homophobia, transphobia, Islamophobia, ableism—these discriminations often overlap with antisemitism and work hand in hand with it. Nazi horror shows this clearly. Modern instances closer to home are also plentiful: for example, Jews of color also experience racism or Islamophobia, and sometimes both. (Think back to America just after 9/11.) White supremacy's appetite is ravenous and its tools, wide and adaptive.

The strongest protection against antisemitism is for people of as many intersecting identities as possible to see their own struggles for respect, equity, and freedom recognized by and reflected in Jewish practice.

---

Allowing our solidarity to be similarly wide is not easy, especially in the moments when we feel most under threat. We may fear diminishing public urgency around antisemitism if we group these other oppressions together with it. We may fear that conversations about intersectional marginalized identities invite criticism of Jews. Particularly in conversations about Israel and Palestine, we may fear to encounter what MRC's statement calls a second lie—one that is at the center of what we call Antisemitism 2.0. It is brilliantly crafted, fast becoming part of mainstream thinking, and puts Jews in a terrible philosophical corner. That lie goes as follows:

If you support Israel's right to exist, you are a racist.

If you are a Jew, you support Israel's right to exist.

Therefore, if you are Jewish, you are a racist. ...

This is a pernicious, terrible use of false logic. ... It is no more true than saying that if you support Palestine's right to exist, you must be an antisemite.

Good-faith conversations about overlapping marginalized identities and discrimination will not include this lie, but can still ask a lot of us. Yet to silence those conversations would be an injustice itself. It would turn people who could and should be allies to one another into opponents.

Making our Jewish selves more vulnerable is, I suspect, the last thing any of us want to do when we think about fighting antisemitism. But as we ask rugged self-examination of potential antisemitism from folks who are not Jews, in the service of Jewish safety and a better and more just world for all, I believe we need to be ready to do the same. We can go both narrow and wide. Complex conversations about America strengthen love for our country; so too, complex conversations about Jewish practice and institutions strengthen our ties to both.

Our own Temple community can be a supportive place to discuss antisemitism, its edges and connections. On November 5, at Israel Chavurah, we'll take a look together at T'ruah: The Rabbinic Call for Human Rights' A Very Brief Guide to Antisemitism, which includes T'ruah's criteria for when criticism of Israel crosses the line into antisemitism and when it doesn't. I encourage you to read the linked PDF of the guide—truly, very brief—before our meeting so that we can come ready to talk with one another about it and our reactions to it.

At the end of October, our temple's book group discussed Dara Horn's phenomenal and provocative work People Love Dead Jews. In it, Horn includes Kirsten Fermaglich's account of Jewish immigrant name changes on and after arrival to the USA—which, overwhelmingly, were made not at Ellis Island by immigration officials but in courtrooms at the requests of the Jews themselves. "The unofficial nature of American antisemitism encouraged many Jews to resist discrimination by using bureaucratic name change petitions to reshape their personal identity rather than civil rights activism to change an unfair society."<sup>1</sup> My own hope is that when we fight antisemitism together, we also fight temptations and pressures to divide our sense of what is just for Jews from our sense of what is just for bearers of other oppressed minority identities. I hope that fear will not reshape our Jewish identity—as a people who have always understood ourselves to bear the history of oppression and therefore the commandment to fight it wherever we see it—in avoidance of activism that may require us to put more of our selves on the line.

I believe that the strongest protection against antisemitism is for people of as many intersecting identities as possible to see their own struggles for respect, equity, and freedom recognized by and reflected in Jewish practice. When our Jewish struggle against antisemitism becomes both a mirror and a window, then, God willing, we and all around us will see our way clear to a better world.

Let's talk!

L'shalom,
Cantor Vera

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Welcome, friends,

It has been an eventful fall, and life is finally starting to slow down. I am sure that our professional staff and volunteers are relishing in the brief respite of Cheshvan. Enjoy the downtime that the fall, the cold dark mornings, and Cheshvan offer. It is the welcome in-between time, after the long hot summer days have ended but before the harsh weather of winter arrives.

We made it through the High Holy Days and the chaos that ensued from S'lichot through Simchat Torah. During those weeks, we experienced many beautiful and inspiring moments, from the lovely sound of the choir to the thoughtful words from Cantor Vera, Phil, and Scott. We were blessed to have many opportunities to gather, both online and in person.

Did I mention that we were in person for the High Holy Days? Baruch Hashem! It was awe-inspiring to see so many faces and be able to greet so many fellow congregants. I was happy to see that people were comfortable returning to the sanctuary and engaging with fellow congregants. If you have any feedback about the services, I welcome your comments and look forward to hearing what you loved (or didn't love).

Welcome to Cheshvan! It's finally time to turn on the heat. (I can't continue to torment the family as temperatures are starting to consistently dip into the thirties and forties overnight.) Pull on a sweater, check out the Temple calendar, and join me in coming to visit the building—for a service, a book talk, or just to meet Lisa. The building is warm—physically and emotionally—and we would love to see you!

Sunday, November 13 | 10:00 am
via Zoom

Jennifer Anne Moses is the author of seven books of fiction and non-fiction, as well as a collection of poetry scheduled for publication in 2023. The Man Who Loved His Wife, a collection of short stories written in the Yiddish tradition, grapples with the many permutations of what it means to be Jewish in the modern world. According to Leon Weiseltier, Moses has "the Malamudian touch." The stories in this book have been described as "unforgettable" (Jewish Boston), "as quintessentially Jewish as Philip Roth's or Bernard Malamud's" (The Jewish Standard), and "funny, sly, poignant, intelligent ... and profoundly Jewish" (Lilith).

HASIFRIYAH BOOKNOTES

Jewish Book Month is Here!

The roots of Jewish Book Month can be traced back to 1925, when a Boston librarian curated a display of Judaic books as the focus of what she termed “Jewish Book Week.” The event spread to communities around the country and was later expanded to a one-month celebration falling immediately before Chanukah to promote Jewish books as gifts. This year, Jewish Book Month begins on November 18. Visit HaSifriyah for displays of recent books of note and lists of recommended titles. Check out our Bookshop.org storefront for gifts. Join a book club discussion. And most of all, read Jewish books!

New titles in HaSifriyah:

Fiction

Bernard Malamud: The Complete Stories

Classic Yiddish Stories of S. Y. Abramovitsh, Sholem Aleichem, and I. L. Peretz, edited by Ken Frieden

Fleishman Is In Trouble by Taffy Brodesser-Akner (on Hulu in November!)

The Vixen, by Francine Prose

Yiddish Folktales, edited by Beatrice Weinreich

Nonfiction

Ethel Rosenberg: An American Tragedy by Anne Sebba

From the Vilna Ghetto to Nuremberg: Memoir and Testimony by Abraham Sutzkever

The Golem and the Wondrous Deeds of the Maharal of Prague by Yudi Rosenberg

Inheritance by Dani Shapiro

In Search of a Lost Ladino: Letter to Antonio Saura by Marcel Cohen

★ TEMPLE EMANU-EL ★

Honor Your Father and Your Mother

It is a widely observed Jewish tradition to commemorate the passing of a loved one by memorializing those that have departed with a yahrzeit plaque on a dedicated memorial wall.

At Temple Emanu-El, these plaques are lit on the yahrzeit, or anniversary of death, and for Yizkor services.

Plaques are inscribed with the name of the deceased in both English and Hebrew as well as the date of the person's death. They are available to view whenever the sanctuary is open.

The one-time cost of the plaque is $300. To purchase a plaque in honor of a departed loved one, please contact Lisa or Cantor Vera at 978.373.3861.
